Around Lake Pennesseewassee

Mrs. George Heiser, who has been at one of the Vivian cottages since June, has returned to her home in New York City.

Bass fishing is growing better every day. Bart Judkins is guiding a party from Shepard's Camps.

O. R. Wilcox of Elizabeth, N. J., occupying the Miller cottage, has returned home. Mr. and Mrs. Balkey and guest of Elizabeth, N. J., are now at the Miller cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Hall and daughter of Providence, R. I., have the Luck cottage this week.

E. J. Kelley and party of New York occupying the Jones cottage, have gone to their home.

The gradual dropping of the water level is causing Bert Hosmer some uneasiness. He plans to beach his large power boats about September 1 if this scarcity continues. Water is very low, between the public wharf and Crockett's Bridge, outside the channel.

Tax Money

Just a little short of $2,000 was received by Collector Bickford for week ending Wednesday afternoon. Dollars are rolling in and the town officers are paying bills with cash and not promises.

This excellent response by the tax payers to relieve the binding conditions the first four months has resulted in a grand total of $26,747.03. The sum is said to be the largest collected to date in many years.

By paying a few dollars when convenient, the tax account is gradually reduced and before one realizes, Presto! the bill is settled, without hardship or year end worry.

Poll taxes were due long ago and are subject to right measures for collection. Just a dollar now and then will help a lot.

Narrow Escape

Colored Pitcher Probably Saved Boy's Life

Bill Jackman, popular hurler for the Philadelphia Colored Giants, saved Robert Hobbs, aged 7 years, a serious, if not fatal accident at the Oklahoma Indian ball game, Thursday afternoon, on Oxford County fair grounds.

One of the Indian braves was at batting practice and the boy wandered on the diamond, inside the first base line. Bill Jackman, playing for the Norway-Paris team, was escorting the boy to a safe place when a hard drive started from the plate, not thirty feet away. The youngster was in direct line. Jackman, trained to be alert, instantly realized the danger and stabbed the ball, within a few inches of the child's head.

The youngster escaped, but the pitcher's right hand was badly hurt. In spite of pain and soreness, he went into the game and held the Indians to seven hits and one earned run in a cluster of six.

Jackman is popular with the Norway and South Paris fans, although he has been, more than once, responsible for the Phillies clipping it over the local team.

Robert is the son of Frank Hobbs, manager of the Norway-Paris team, and secretary-treasurer of the N. and P. Athletic Association.

PERSEIDS

The evening of August 11, was an ideal one, locally, for watching those weasels of the sky, the Perseids.

As darkness set in the fascinatng display began. Between 9.15 and 10.15 o'clock daylight time, the writer saw 22 darting meteors. At early evening the majority apparently emanating from in the double star-cluster in Perseus in the North, quite high, just below Cassiopeia. Most of meteors darted toward the "square of Pegasus" at an altitude of about 40 degrees from the horizon.

Some of these rocket like objects made their journey in different directions, some south, others west, some of them seemed to come head-on, one extremely brief, exploding without traveling. Another flying across the sky with a bright white narrow trail then widening, almost expiring, then continue in a short dim path. Their behavior are so varied and so interesting.

These observations will be reported to the meteor department of the nearest observatory which reports are gladly received from any one who will be a willing watcher of the radiants that shoot for a few evenings in August.

These hours go into effect next Monday, August 21st.

INDIANS PLAY BENEFIT ENGAGEMENT

The Norway-Paris A. A. has been successful in booking for a return engagement on Thursday afternoon, Aug. 24, Jim Thorpe and his Oklahoma Indian Baseball Club.

Over twelve hundred fans paid admission to the Fair Grounds to see this club on its first appearance in Maine last week and although the Indians were victorious to the tune of six to one, it was the opinion of many fans that the visitors scored but two earned runs. No game in recent history has drawn so large a gate nor caused more discussion and many Norway-Paris boosters are confident that the home-town boys will turn the tables on the Indians at their return engagement.

The game is to be played for the benefit of the American Legion with the idea of compensating this organization for the use of its hall for baseball and Athletic Association meetings. Advertising is being circulated among all the Legion Posts throughout the county and the genial and optomistic business manager of the local club, Frank Hobbs, is predicting a crowd that will break the records of all time.

Jackman, the Colored Giants' pitching ace, will again be on the mound for Norway-Paris. He is laying it on the line that he can take the Indians.

The Chief Welch Indian Medicine Man has again settled in town, at the same stand, on Danforth Street. For six months or more the office has been open only on broken time.

Mrs. Emma "Gram" Dunham, widow of Mellie Dunham, celebrated her 75th birthday, Monday, at the Central Maine General Hospital at Lewiston, where she is a patient. She received a post card shower, also a sunshine box and birthday cake from the Heywood Club at Crockett Ridge. "Gram" has been an active member of her neighborhood club for many years.

Mrs. Edith S. Bartlett entertained the members and guests of the Jolly Club members at Bartlett Island, at Lake Keewaydin, Friday. Luncheon was served at one o'clock. In the gathering were, besides the hostess, Mrs. Elizabeth Bartlett, Mrs. Alice Stearns, Mrs. Florence Bradbury, Mrs. Annie Farrar, Mrs. Geneva Cook, Mrs. Alice Mclver, Mrs. Inez Hills, Mrs. Jane Foster, Mrs. Grace Cushman, Mrs. Lillian Locke, Mrs. Bessie Hutchins, Mrs. Annie Carroll, Mrs. Nellie Curtis, Mrs. Nellie Shepard, Mrs. Mattie Cummings, Mrs. Elizabeth Sampson, Mrs. Mabel Leavitt, Mrs. Alice Fuller of Bath, Mrs. Josephine Stone of Indianapolis, Indiana.

NORWAY GRANGE

Norway Grange held its regular meeting August 12th. The Worthy Master being sick, the meeting was called to order by Ralph Watson, the overseer. Several of the officers were absent.

After the regular business was done, the meeting was turned over to the Assistant Lecturer, Ella Perry, for that meeting, who presented the following program:

Opening Song, "Love's Old Sweet Song"....
Talk, Why and in which way is the code going to effect us?.....Fred H. Perry discussed by most of the members in the Grange.
Question Box. There were several cute and witty questions asked.
Arthur Holman talked on the Referendum Bill, which was very interesting.
Closing Song, "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

Next meeting, the program will be in charge of the 4-H Club leaders. Light refreshments will be served.

Those in charge of the refreshments are Viola Abbott, Harriette Buck and Ella Perry.

Miss Marion E. Noble of Detroit, formerly of Waterford is a guest at the Geo. F. Hill cottage at the lake.

Mount Hope Rebekah Lodge will hold its August meeting, Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock, and as the second nomination of officers will take place, a large attendance is urged.

Dr. Chesley W. Nelson has bought the former Charles A. Allen homestead on Main Street of Mrs. Frank P. Knight and will move soon from South Paris.

The Past Presidents' Club of Elizabeth Crockett Blake Tent, Daughters of Veterans, passed a very pleasant evening the past week at the home of Mrs. H. Leon Kimball. There were eleven in the gathering to enjoy a fine supper and admire Mrs. Kimball's beautiful flower gardens. In the business meeting that followed the supper, one new member was added to the roll. Mrs. J. Edward Sharon will be hostess for the September meeting, the date to be decided later.

Jim Thorp's "Injuns" Took Scalps

Ben Harjo's Indians, featuring Jim Thorpe, the famous athlete, and Norway-Paris presenting Bill Jackman, the popular scoop pitcher of the Philadelphia Colored Giants, made headliners who attracted 1,200 baseball fans to Oxford County Fair Grounds Thursday afternoon. This was the largest sport crowd for many years.

The "Injuns" scalped the Norway-Paris Pine Tree team 6 to 1 in the exhibition game, but the hairy top-pieces came hard. For some reason, the pale faces let up at critical stages and put Jackson, the colored under-hand thrower, in several bad holes. Seven hits were accredited to the Red Men from the West, five being scratch or gifts. Nine bit the dust by the air route.

Holmes was master of the locals and had their number recorded. Tony Lombardi, Russell and Gallagher safely negotiated the hand-outs for two singles and a double. Beyond that, nothing went through the infield skirmish line for the Indians had every nook and crannie guarded with an eye like an eagle. Fast work outfield handed down numerous long bingles that started for safe hits.

Barrett pulled a circus stunt in center field while handling Bailey's line drive. The fielder came in hard, grabbed the ball, then fell for a series of rolls. He held the ball and retired the batter.

The Indians are great ball players and the outfit numbers nineteen men. They travel in a comfortable bus said to represent $11,000. Ben Harjo, a wealthy Indian, is boss, and touring is one of his hobbies. Jim Thorpe in person is the box office attraction, but in engagement, he divided honors with Bill Jackman, the Phillie twirler. Thorpe is the world's greatest athlete, who, in 1912, won the Olympic games, single handed, for the United States, by winning both the Decathalon and the Panthalon events, known as the All-Arounds.

A return game will be played on the fair grounds Thursday, August 24. Bill Jackman will pitch.

On Wednesday, August 16th, a group of W. C. T. U. ladies and their families met on the lawn of Mrs. Mary Kimball for a social hour and supper. Mrs. Kimball proved a most delightful hostess, the special attraction being her lovely flower flower garden with its one hundred and seventy-five varieties, all in bloom. The affair proved to be one of the most enjoyable occasions of the year.

Pine Tree League

Norway-Paris 6; Wilton 2

On Sunday, Norway-Paris clashed with Wilton at the fair grounds and slipped over a fast one by winning with a 6-2 score.

As it happened, the Twins settled the argument in the first inning by dropping three runs in the bag. This frame was a free hitting program led by Cole, Lombardi, Russell, Hall and Gallagher.

Wilton made a bid in the third and laned all their runs for the game, one being forced on to pass.

Norway-Paris found a lone score in the fifth and a pair in the seventh.

Barrett pulled a flashy running catch in the seventh that was appreciated by better than 400 spectators present.

ALBERT L. F. PIKE

Albert Luther Farrar Pike, 85, a prominent Odd Fellow and well known business man, passed away the morning of August 15, at his residence, 50 Main St., Norway. His health had been unusually good until April, when serious illness developed. For a time he rallied, then failed rapidly the past eight weeks.

He was born in Norway, October 8, 1848, the son of Luther F. and Adelaide Millett Pike. The homstead was on the present Fred Noble farm, Crockett's Ridge, but in 1851 the family moved to the Roscoe Bradbury place on the southerly side of Pike's Hill, where they resided until 1872, then settled in the village.

Mr. Pike was educated at the Norway Liberal Institute. After reaching his majority, he worked for a time in Massachusetts, but returned to Norway, where he passed the remainder of his life.

He worked in the paper mill at the falls, was a carpenter, a shoe worker at the B. F. Spinney & Co., and in 1887 commenced manufacturing Brown's Relief in company with Dr. G. W. Brown, under the name Norway Medicine Co. As a public servant, he was school agent, town treasurer, corporation assessor, member of the Second Congregational Parish, and collector for many years, to the time of his death. He had a prominent part in erecting the church after the fire in 1894 and was chairman of the committee for building Odd Fellows' Block.

Mr. Pike joined Norway Lodge I. O. O. F. in 1876 and Wildey Encampment the next year, was admitted to the Grand Lodge in 1882 and held numerous offices. He was Past Grand Master and Past Grand Representative to Grand Lodge of Maine and Past President and Past Grand Representative of the Maine Association. Norway National Bank

Community Bank In Operation—Opened For Business Last Monday—Good Will of the Community Expressed.

The long awaited event has come to pass. Norway National Bank, the new bank organized by the citizens of this locality, opened its doors for business on Monday, August 14. In spite of the fact that no formal notice was given and that it was opened almost as soon as word was received from Washington that the charter had been granted, the word spread quickly and a large number of new accounts were opened. It is just another bit of evidence of what a small community can do when they put their shoulders to the wheel.

After the bank holiday was declared on March 4 and as soon as people sensed that this section of Maine could not exist without a commercial bank, a movement was started to establish a bank. Fred W. Sanborn, of Norway, offered to take a substantial block of stock if a new bank were formed, and from this finally emerged the Norway National Bank, which is now open for business. The first meeting to ascertain what could be done toward the establishment of a bank was held on April 9, and a group of nineteen citizens met to discuss the matter of what measures should be taken. It was the unanimous opinion that a bank was necessary and a large majority favored a local national bank, owned and managed locally, to serve this section of Maine which was without banking facilities. At a subsequent meeting, committees were appointed, chairmen designated, and after considerable work, the necessary capital was subscribed. Application was then made to the comptroller of the currency, and the many technical requirements that consumed time were finally complied with.

The morning of the opening, the bank lobby was alive with beautiful flowers, all sincere expressions of gratitude for the return of an old and much respected institution. All the employes of the new bank radiated a genuine happiness and joy, and it was no effort for them to render courteous and efficient service to all. The lines of depositors and the actual deposits received bear abundant testimony that people of the highest financial standing in our towns have confidence in the new bank, and the support already extended has far exceeded the most optimistic hopes of the directors.

Since our banks were closed, all have realized that strangulation of credit and absence of banking facilities would soon convert any town into a cemetery. Without a strong bank, local homes and real estate would be practically worthless, and our better class stores would have to leave our communities or go bankrupt.

The citizens of our communities, sensing the situation, and deeply conscious of the ever increasing list of business casualties, determined to act and public spirited men of our communities held many meetings and burned much midnight oil, and out of it all came a decision to form the now existing Norway National Bank. On every hand, people of all walks of life came forward with eagerness and contributed their hard earned money to the extent of $62,500, that the Norway National Bank might be returned to our towns and the way paved for a new local prosperity anchored to a firm, clean foundation.

The Norway National Bank was formed with a Capital of $50,000 and a Surplus of $12,500. The stockholders met, as prescribed by law, and elected the following Directors: Harry Brown, of So. Paris; Lawrence M. Carroll, Walter P. Cullinan, Arthur W. Easton, all of Norway; Edwin J. Mann, of West Paris; F. W. Sanborn and Leroy Spiller, both of Norway. The Directors met and chose the following officers to hold office until the Annual Meeting: Arthur W. Easton, President; Fred W. Sanborn, Vice President, and Fred E. Smith, Cashier.

The officers and directors were examined by a Federal representative of the Comptroller of the Currency, this examination lasting the greater part of an afternoon, it being very thorough and complete and covering both the personnel and proposed financial set-up, all of which met with the hearty approval of the Federal officials. The Federal Examiner did stress the point that he felt the bank would grow so fast that it would probably be necessary at some time in the not too distant future to increase our capital, as the ratio of $1 of capital to $10 of deposits is nearly always maintained. When a capital increase becomes necessary, due to this healthy growth in the bank's business, the original stockholders will be given the first rights to participate in this prosperity.

In addition to receiving checking deposits and savings deposits, the bank is authorized to act in fiduciary capacities, such as Executor Under Wills, Administrator of Estates, etc. It also has safe deposit boxes to rent.

The Directors are determined that there shall be no criticism of the way in which the bank is run and that it shall be operated in an economical manner. Overhead, such as salaries, rental, etc., is one-third of the 1929 overhead. This means employees working hard at a real sacrifice and that they are contributing their share toward the success of the bank. Until substantial earnings are developed, all of the officers and directors, with the exception of the Cashier, are serving without any compensation.

Under present conditions, the investment policy of this bank will be at least 50% cash and Government Bonds, a policy that our largest and safest banks are pursuing at the present time.

Only commercial paper thoroughly liquid, or high grade, that permits its rediscount at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston will be accepted, thereby keeping all deposits in any amount instantly available to the depositors at any time they want it. Withdrawals will be received in the same spirit as deposits and with every attendant courtesy.

Any person who is at all familiar with the new Federal Banking laws realizes that the Federal Government has thrown endless safeguards around the conduct of national banks, giving the depositor the assurance of absolute safety.

The bank has no mortgages and no frozen assets, no doubtful assets; it is absolutely clean, a bank with new money, and it is in the heart of every director and every employee to keep it clean. An arrangement has already been made with one of the strongest banks in New England to serve us in an advisory capacity, a connection that will prove to be of inestimable value to our depositors. Another safeguard of depositors' money which should not be overlooked is the fact that the new Glass-Stegall Act provides for insurance of deposits on and after January 1, 1934.

A Plea For Cemetery Improvement

A True Situation, But a Sad One

Despite the beauty of the Maine Hills, and the hospitality of the people here, it is really pathetic to see the actual condition of over ninety per cent of the rural cemeteries.

Recently, I had occasion to lay away one of my immediate family in a small rural cemetery in Oxford County, and I assure you, my grief was forgotten in the heartbreak of realization of the deplorable condition of the grave yard.

Farmers take such pride in their hay fields, and battle weeds and witch grass with an untiring energy, and housewives spend hours at a time digging out the dandelion and plantain leaves, yet here, in this little church yard, where I was forced to leave my loved one, grave stones were toppled over, weeds were knee high, many graves were sunken and—this was the last impression I had—berry bushes with berries blue and ripe on their branches took the place of what one would really expect—a floral memorial to the dead.

Naturally I paid attention to other grave yards as we have motored here and there throughout this section. It is the same condition one meets, and the same heartbreak that one gains. Such conditions leave an indelible blot upon a memory of a wonderful scenery.

In Europe, respect is shown even to the death-hearse as it goes to the graveyard, for men stand in silence with uncovered head, with a

It was a big surprise, also a delightful one to Mrs. Morrison, as her nephew had not been in Maine, his home state, for fourteen years. He is the son of Walter Gordon of Sweden, who died several years ago. William had a desire to go into the Navy before he was twenty years of age. He traveled in various parts of the world and was an electrician by trade. At the age of twenty-two years, he married, in California, and has a family of four children, three girls and one boy, all of whom he is very proud. He is doing a good business for himself, under the name of "Gordon's Wrought Iron Works" at his shop in Glendale, Calif., where he has lived since his marriage. William and his family left California July 15, for the World's Fair at Chicago, his wife having many cousins there. They are enjoying a delightful trip, coming via Canada and Boston, the Lincoln Highway, and are soon to return via New York and Washington, D. C. They motored in their comfortable Packard car. His many friends here are glad to see him once more and to know he is doing so well. He sure has made good. "Bill" as they call him, says business is picking up well in California, common laborers are now getting three dollars or more per day, although it was hard for a time.

Lottie Morrison enjoyed a short trip August 6, with her nephew, Wm. Gordon and family, calling on her sister, Alice Briggs, of Lovell, also other relatives at Smart's Hill and Lovell Center.

Although the crowd was not as large as in years, all those who attended the Parish Field Day at Round's Field last Saturday had a good time. An interesting feature of the day which was missed by many of those present was the girls' baseball game in the forenoon. The baseball events were worth seeing, too, but the ball game in the afternoon started before they were over and all did not see them. We will look for another day next year.

The supper and program given by the Waterford Young People for the benefit of the Young People's Conference expenses cleared about $10. Those assisting with the teaching there were Hazel Nason, Marion Brandon, Louise Stone, Eugenia Collins, Annie Bell, Celia Gardner, Mary Hersey, Barbara Fillebrown, Ella Rice, Helen Kirk, Virginia Tyler and Frank Morse.

At the East Stoneham school, certificates of attendance were not given but the following children earned them, had also been money to buy the certificates: Barbara Trimback, Helen Trimback, Beth Bodner, Ivy Philbrook, Harvey Lord, Norman Ferrington, Robert Hill, John Bailey, Lawrence McAllister, Arlene Sanderson, Rama Paine, Earlon Curtis, Alton Curtis, Ava McKeen, Gwendolyn Lavitt, Myrtle Smith, Robert Paine, Carlee Allen, Barbara Paine, Eleanore Files, Benny Button, Celia McAllister, Marion Lapham, Dorothy Curtis, Madeline Bird, Beatrice Cauwell, Sylvia Bird, Hilda Stearns, Margaret Hill, Jean Hill, Mildred Stanley, Helen Kimball, Flora Kimball, Virginia McKay, Alair Bailey, Francis Files, Ursula Laroque, Elizabeth Littlefield, Bertha Hersey, Charlotte Crouse, Eudora Coleman, Arlene Coughlin, Gertrude McKeen, Myrtle Lapham, Erma Paine, Winfield Adams, John Files, Vivian Hatch, Dwight Grover, Bill Burton, Alton Rich, Kirtland Lord, Erma Curtis, Erlon Paine, Sargent Coleman, Robert Trimback, Albert Weymouth and Marion Barker.

A Few Items from Worcester, Mass.

Which are really echoes from little old North Waterford, Maine, concerning inhabitants who lived there many years ago. When I read in the Advertiser that the recent wedding was the only one ever held in the Congregational Church, I recalled one, when the church was first built, in 1861, and wrote an item to your correspondent of my memory of that event. From that item, I have received several letters from those who remembered the event. Among them, one from Mrs. Isaac Jewett of Waterford, whose maiden name was Nancy Warren. She said she recalled that wedding very vividly for she was 12 years old and with her father and mother and sister Jane (now Mrs. Stone) were the only ones who sat at the wedding feast with the family. Her father was a cousin to the bride's father and presided at the table. Mary's father had passed away. The wedding party drove to the church in an express wagon, the bridegroom, Nathaniel Hodgdon, and the bride, Mary Chaplin, on the front seat, with her two sisters on the second seat. (Think of this, you modern brides, with your automobiles and needed attendants). Mary had borrowed for the occasion a valued white silk shawl from her cousin, Harriet Davenport Mead of North Bridgton, and in some turn of the wagon (or Fate), the shawl was torn, a horrible three-cornered tear, plainly visible to the waiting audience. Of course the whole party was in great distress, but by successful management, it was folded from sight in a graceful way that looked as if intended. Though the shawl was a treasure, the owner was most submissively forgiving, but the happiness of the bridal party was clouded with sorrowful misgiving for it was looked upon as a bad omen.

Young Hodgdon came from Aroostook County to teach school in Miss Mary's district, and after they were married they went to Carmi, Illinois, and returning, Mr. Hodgdon enlisted in the Civil War, leaving Mary at her parental home. On his discharge, they built a nice home on the shore of Lake Kezar, the land being given to them by an uncle, John Chaplin, who only lived a few years. The Chaplin family were refined and educated, the uncle, John, being a great student.

It is worthy of mention that an uncle of their father, Deacon David Chaplin, once lived with the family and died April 3, 1835, aged 81. He was engaged in the battle of Bunker Hill, having enlisted in the Revolutionary War. He was engaged at Ticonderoga at White Plains at the evacuation of the city of New York, and was present at the surrender of Burgoyne. His life was spared and he returned to his native town of Rowley, Mass., and was a teacher for many years, a devout christian, respected by everyone.

In 1798, having never married, he went to Waterford to live with his nephews. His was the first burial in the North Waterford cemetery and he lies in a nameless grave, away from the family he loved.

From the first observance of Memorial Day, a neighbor of mine, Luella Caldwell, whose soldier lover had been buried in Florida, went every year to decorate five graves in that secluded cemetery, Moses Rand, Lewis Sawin, Calvin Horr, Daniel Smith, and we never forgot that soldier of the Revolution, the forgotten man in the nameless grave. Who, in our next generation, will think of him?

—Ellen Millett Davenport.

"Sorry to be late, Bill, but the only way I can ever get a chance to drive this car is when Dad isn't looking."
"Excuse accepted—I'm full of Terraplane parent-trouble, myself. My wise elders now go Terraplaning and leave the heavy old bus sulking in the garage."

TERRAPLANING day by day keeps the service bills away!
Let's dispose of the question of economy right away, so you can buy an Essex Terraplane just for the fun and thrills it will bring you.
Terraplane owners all over America have compared Terraplane expense with that of every other car on the road.
Their sworn affidavits (18 to 26 miles per gallon for the Six, 15 to 18 miles per gallon for the Eight, no oil additions between changes, 20 to 30 thousand miles per set of tires, 1/16 to 1/14 cent per mile for service) would convince any Supreme Court that the Terraplane was the best automobile-friend any pocketbook ever found.
If you need a jury, too, the next twelve Terraplane owners you meet will give a unanimous verdict.
So, now—you can forget expense and think only of the swell time you'll have making molehills out of mountains without gear-shifting, giving the slip to any kind of traffic, sweeping quietly along smooth highways like a mail-plane on the wing.
That's Terraplaning! Just try it!

CUTTING THE GARMENT ACCORDING TO THE CLOTH

A certain Maine weekly paper came out with four pages instead of the customary eight. Some of its patrons are making quite a little complaint, saying "that is no kind of a paper to put out," etc., etc. Well, other things being equal, probably an eight-page or a 12-page paper is better than one of only four pages; but if a newspaper publisher gets only enough patronage to warrant a four-page paper, we admire his good sense and grit in putting out just that kind of paper, instead of going ahead and trying to put out one that will cost him twice as much as he is receiving. Andrew Carnegie or John D. Rockefeller of course could, if he wished to do so, publish, a good paper quite a while on a very small income, losing money right along, yet we doubt if one of them ever did such a thing as a matter of business. The ordinary newspaper publisher, however, is by no means a millionaire, and can not afford to put out a big and fine paper on an income of a quarter of what his paper really deserves to receive.

Heard and Seen at Advertiser Office

An auction will be held Saturday, August 19, at the residence of Mrs. Sarah O. Hamlin, at Mutiny Corner, South Waterford. See ad in this issue.

Mrs. Ellen Millett Davenport sends us a few items from Worcester, Mass. telling our readers about the first wedding that took place at North Waterford. You will find the article on page three.

We are printing each week a continued story entitled "The Red Head," written by a local young man, Harry Walker. As the weeks pass the story is increasing in interest. Read it and see how Elaine Winton is going to make out on her New York trip—the situation is becoming more complicated.

You folks who are interested in the Waterfords (and we wonder who is not?) want to watch out for a story by John Quill and read it. You will enjoy it. It contains a lot of good information and speaks a good word for the town. Be sure and read it. "A Vacation in Waterford" in next week's issue.

C. H. C. Wright, of Cambridge, Mass. a summer resident on the Maxim place, near Crocker Hill in Paris called Tuesday for directions to Greenwood Ice Caves. He was the senior member of a party seeking that once favorite spot for nature hunters. On a former trip they failed but we trust our suggestions from experience in that territory forty years ago proved helpful in finding a great natural curiousity.

C. H. Brush, of Philadelphia, one of the summer colony at Lake Pennesseewassee and a member of the Paris Hill Country Club informs us the golf handicap of 18 holes to be played August 22 at Paris Hill is a Kicker's Handicap, so called. Par is an unknown number figure from 63-69 inclusive. Every player chooses his own handicap, one nearest par drawn will be declared the winner. Suitable prizes are offered and the play may be morning or afternoon. A small fee will be charged to include entrance and greens.

Observers interested in astronomy spent some time Friday night watching the Perseid meteors shooting in many directions from a point in the east. The display could not be classed spectacular like the solar eclipse last August but the "shooters" were frequent enough to hold ones attention. Freeland Howe stationed on Cole's Hill for a time up to midnight, counted one hundred and more some only a faint streak while others were bright and left a train of sparks. The Advertiser observer earlier in the evening picked up a score or more but the shooting had long waits between acts. Much like waiting for the will-o-the-wisp a few years ago.

Editor of Advertiser: For several seasons I have been a visitor with friends at the lake shore and this season I have noticed a decided low watermark which has made considerable bother and trouble for many of the cottagers around the lake whom I know. One man can't get his expensive boat out of the lake shore boat house, another friend had to go to the trouble of having a new float made to use his boats—I hear all around the lake among the cottagers, complaints as to the lower water level this year than for many seasons past.

Inasmuch as there are thousands of dollars in taxes paid to the town, as well as thousands of dollars paid Norway merchants it would seem only fair that the town's officials saw to it that the water level in the lake is kept up with reason for the benefit of the many summer folks who bring so much money to the town.

I find that the level of water at this date is six inches below the mean water level established by the proper officials and last season the water level was over a foot above this mean water level. This makes the water level this season over one and one-half feet below the level, which has been the custom past seasons. During the past five summers which I have been on the lake, I have heard no complaints from cottage owners until this season.

I have been told that through the efforts of one man that the level of water at the lake is what it is this season. Do the citizens of Norway value more catering to one man or two hundreds of cottagers who spend thousands of dollars in Norway?

There is usually a happy medium to all things and it seems to me that there ought to be a happy medium for the level of water in the lake during the summer when so many campers are here.

I have heard of no legal court ruling which makes the present level of water in the lake justified by the state courts. Not even Mr. Insull's Central Maine Water Co. has the right to dictate to the state what the level of water shall be in lake waters as they are the property of the state and not of any individual or town. The shore line may be, but not the water.

I have heard some talk of a petition being passed among the cottagers and if this is done, I am sure it is an act justified by the conditions as found.

—A. G. Smith, west shore camp.

MAINE HILL BILLY

Hello, Everbody—Walter Winchell, that great columnist, does not appear to be much of a prize fighter, for he retaliated Al Jolson's poke in the nose with a law suit for a cold half million. I presume it is all in the bag. Winchell and Jolson thought the public was not going very hot for them since Nira stepped up and made her debut to the Nation. So they thought they would put on this grand stand play and give the people something hot to talk about. You have got to admit these boys are clever for some of the people are really falling for the gag seriously.

Now just as Nira was getting her greatest thrills of popularity all over this country, someone has gone and spoiled her good name and taken the eye out of Nira, so poor Nira has lost her feminine instincts. Mr. Roosevelt is sending those Blue Eagle emblems with just the three letters N. R. A. by fast army airplanes all over our United States. Poor Nira has almost died in her infancy, but she has done herself well as some new mothers were inclined to be patriotic in this war on depression and their beloved daughters were given that name Nira and it will be passed ahead for all coming generations and live on forever. She started things a-going so let's all hop on the band wagon and do our part and support the members of the Blue Eagle. I am afraid that those men that do not jump on the wagon will find out that Uncle Sam now means business and may get down to that old fashioned idea of boycotting and then the slackers will simply be out of luck or out of business.

I took a flying trip to Salem, Mass. the other day. Naturally being a curious sort of a fellow to get a glimpse of that woman, who is on trial for her life, namely, Jessie Costello. My trip wasn't in vain for I got a good look at that remarkable woman. She was leaving the court house with a brisk step and a very gallant expression on her not hard to look at face. She certainly has won the support of the public in the manner she has faced her trial. It being considered one of the greatest trials in the history of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. By the time you read these lines her fate will be decided by those twelve men that are chosen to do justice to our laws. She is very confident she will be acquitted and free to return to her three darling children that need their mother. But fate will take its course with all of us. The nation awaits the verdict.

There are thousands of baseball fans down this way and when they are not talking about Nira, Jessie or the New Beer, they are either going in to the games or booming the home teams. Boston has two teams, namely the Braves and the Red Sox and they have been doing some interesting stuff this year, even if they are down some in the averages. Boston is considered one of the best baseball cities there are, for they have real baseball fans here. I noticed while in to a game at Fenway Park, the Red Sox field, there were several cars with Maine license plates, that goes to prove that there are quite a few baseball fans and real sports that come down from the Pine Tree State. I used to think that all the natives did up there was fish and hunt, but I was wrong, I've learned a whole lot in the past few years.

I was visiting some friends the other day and was admiring their comfortable home. They told me that they liked their home all right only they thought they had real nervy neighbors. They showed me a bill that their friend neighbors sent them for eggs they claimed their hens laid in their garden. That's almost as bad as stealing cucumbers out a fellow's garden and then going to his house and borrow some vinegar to put on them. So, so long until a future period.

MA TAKES A RIDE

Read at North Waterford Grange, by Lydia Lord Shedd

My boy wanted to give me a ride
In his new mobubble wagon,
He called it a roundabout,
Said it was like sailin' on the tide,
But 'twant nothin' I could brag on.

We all piled in, and turned about,
The very fust jump it made
It knocked my false teeth out,
I thought that was putty bad,

We went down the road in a cloud o' dust,
My glasses they caved in,
My hat fell off and the feather bust,
All the chillun' did was grin.

Dirt and gravel flew sky-high,
Through mud puddles we went, kerchink,
Mud filled my face and eyes
Till I could skursly see a wink.

When we fust struck the wind,
That mobubble acted like a witch,
My false wig went sailin' out behind,
And landed in the ditch.

What hair was left stood right on end,
I'd lost my net and tail back comb,
And every hairpin that I had,
When startin' out from home.

I was seat and wanted to git out,
Said I feared one of my spells was brewin'
Said they, "Ma, don't go to sittin' out,
Sit still, there's nothin' doin'."

When I fust started out of town
I thought I'se lookin' purty well,
But I tore my best alpacca gown
And split my new balmoral.

When I got settled down, I found
I'd lost my carpet bag and mitts,
If I'd been safe out on the ground,
I'd a giv that old cart fits.

Them new-fangled go-carts, I declare
I hate 'em wus'n the itch,
When I go out with my old mare
I have to ride in the ditch.

They kept a-kitin' up hill and down,
Over sticks and stuns went we,
And when we landed into town
We run kersmash agin' a tree.

I hopped out spry, for one of my size,
As hity tity as you please,
Said they, "Ma, you're a sight for sore eyes,"
That just upsot my last idees.

They said what a nice time they'd had,
If Ma hadn't been so awful green,
I swan that made me hoppin' mad,
An ole mobubble roundabout wished I'd never seen.

NOTES FROM COUNTY EXTENSION WORK

Richard Blanchard, County Agent; Gilberta P. Watters, County Club Agent; Ada Brewster, Home Demonstration Agent

Four Counties to Hold Meetings on Clothing for the Girl in the Teens

In many households the amount of money available for clothing is small at the present time and, even by giving up their teens the lion's share of this money, it is a big problem to secure a satisfactory appearance for them.

It is the hope of helping to solve some of the problems involved in dressing the school girl well on very little that these meetings are to be held in a few towns in Knox, Lincoln, Kennebec, Oxford and Piscataquis counties late in August.

All mothers and daughters near enough are being invited to these two afternoon meetings. They are open to women and farm women and girls, and are of equal interest to both groups. The object of the meeting is to demonstrate points that need to be considered in selecting and making attractive garments of the types best suited to the needs of a girl of high school age. These points will be illustrated by means of garments worn by school girl models, by means of exhibits of garments made and remodeled by girls of school age, by exhibits of shoes and stockings suitable and attractive types, and by a short motion picture showing how to walk in good carriage and poise to help the girl to wear her clothes to better advantage.

Fall and winter fashions for the girl of high school age, at moderate cost, will be shown in Oxford County this month. This year the designers have created clothes especially for this age group, which is most appealing. The girl, like her mother and older sister, has gone in for color with curls, tiny hats and big shoes. But she can wear daring combinations and quaint colors which they would not attempt. High school girls in Oxford will model at the fashion revue which will be held at the Municipal Auditorium at 2 P. M., Tuesday, August 29. There will be a movie on "Color and Line in Dress" as well as the fashion show. Miss Helen Spaulding, state clothing specialist, will explain the fall styles and colors to mothers and daughters in working out clothing budgets. This fashion show is open to the public, and high school girls and their mothers are cordially invited.

Opportunities in Oxford for Pasture Improvement

Several dairy farms in Oxford County were visited Tuesday, August 8, by the county agent and dairy specialist, R. F. Talbot, to look over pastures and make recommendations for pasture improvement. A number of very good opportunities for fertilization and subdivision into small plots were found, and some of the men were much interested to improve their summer feed and let their cows do the work of harvesting.

One very good example of the results of an effort to supply better grazing was seen on the farm of Willard Wyman of Rumford. A three acre plot was fenced out of the field with two strands of barbed wire and 800 lbs. of cyanamid was applied. The stand of grass was good and responded well to the treatment. Eight cows have been allowed the run of it and Mr. Wyman said that they fed his plot most of the time up to the middle of July. Since that time they have been filling up there mornings and going up into the rough pasture during the day. Mr. Wyman said his cows always have gone out to pasture in good condition in the spring, but never until this year have they maintained that condition through the summer.

Probably there is not a pasture in Oxford County that gives adequate feed during the pasture season for the cows that are pastured on it. Most of these pastures could be mproved by one system or another. Many farmers say "Yes," but "How can we afford it at the present price of milk?" Many of these same men are barn feeding with grain or hay or both, and I would like to raise the question, Can you afford not to improve your pasture and let your cows work for you?

This is the time of year to look over your pastures and see if there is not a chance for getting more out of them. Not every pasture can be economically improved and there are different systems that will probably best fit different cases. If you are interested, why not drop your county agent a line and he will be glad to call and talk it over with you.

FROM MY WINDOW

Eva L. Shorey

While riding over Norway and South Paris way, I have often remarked on the visible improvement which has been made, especially along the lake shore, as one approaches Norway. I remember the Oxford Advertiser had much to do with starting a clean-up campaign there. The State government and our State Highway department are cooperating on a program which will be an object lesson in the way to keep the natural beauty of our highways, when surveying for a new road, and to give artistic touches here and there, without great expense. Each town and hamlet can do something in this line, which will return large interest in the enjoyment of simple native trees, shrubs and flowers. This article will deal with changing a dilapidated meeting house and unkept grounds, into an attractive roadside spot, known as Farrar-Mann Memorial Park.

It was way back in 1807, when the First "Perticular" Baptist Church was organized in Bridgton, and later, a substantial meeting house was built, on a lot of land now bordering the Roosevelt highway, on North High Street. In my childhood, it was unused and we often clambered in the windows and explored its ample rooms and played hide and seek among the old fashioned pews. I especially recall the weather vane, which was a gilded rooster, and once, when workmen had left a ladder on the steeple, I, horrified my mother was, yet calm, as was her custom in an emergency, to look up and see me climbing the ladder, and hear me exclaiming, "Oh, mother, the view is wonderful up here!" Which was doubtless true, but which did not interest her so much as to get me down on earth in safety.

The building became legally "abandoned," and the story of how it finally became the property of Farragut Post, G. A. R., and later, of Farragut Memorial Association, is too long and complicated for the length of this article. It included many highlights, some of which were the applicaton to the court by my father and other imembers of Farragut Post for permission to sell the building and use the land for a park, under a State law which permits abandoned church property to be used for public or patriotic purposes; a suit in equity before the Supreme Court, when claim was made to the property by a descendant of the person giving the land for the church; the offer of a soldiers' monument on the lot, when it was prepared; the heartbreaking experience of having the offer withdrawn after the foundation had been prepared. Then the temporary abandonment of any work on the lot for lack of funds, the donating of a Maxim machine gun from the U. S. government, and later, a box of ammunition from Sir Hiram Maxim of London, and almost international complications as the box arrived during the World War, and was held some time in New York. In course of time, the deeding of the land to Farragut Memorial Association, which was formed of the last of the G. A. R. men and existing patriotic bodies. Two large Civil war cannons and cannon balls were obtained, and mounted, the Maxim gun placed in the rear, the grounds graded, a flag and flag pole placed in position, and the grounds kept in order through a fund left for village improvement. Now we have a very creditable park, in the Town House square, which is a memorial to the men who went from their homes to the Civil War, some of whom never returned.

There are many abandoned buildings and plots of land which can be improved and made playgrounds, parks, or simply well kept squares or triangles, and with a little well spent energy, it can be done without much expense and prove a community effort of value in getting people to work together for a common object.

Next week I will tell of a schoolyard, which later became a modern playground.

A FRIEND

What is a friend?
Is it the one that bids us welcome
When skies are bright?
Or is it he who sticks through thick and thin?

What's a friend?
The one who passing by our hearts with a smile has blessed?
No, it's the one who still stands by
Though our faults he knows the best.

What is a friend?
We shall surely know, when the path of duty trod,
We kneel at the throne of the Friend of the world.
For the friend of friends is God.

The Cracker Box

By P. C. Brooks

Do you remember—When bicycles were as common as gas buggies are now and the boys and girls organized "wheel clubs" and scorched sometimes in the tremendous distance of fifteen miles; when the Westinghouse air brake was undreamed of and nearly every "shack" and conductor on the railroad wore his badge of service in crippled hands and missing fingers; when every town boasted a "Livery and Feed Stable" and the height of a boy's ambition was to ride behind a speedy trotter; when folks never were troubled with B. O. and halitosis even though they might have existed, but thousands died of lung fever and typhoid and diphtheria and people looked on these dread diseases as a necessary evil; when revival meetings were the fad and people "got religion" and backslid all in the same week; when you just knew your sweetheart's complexion was the real article and never came from a drug store shelf and the girls and boys played post office and went to Christian Endeavor meetings; when folks thought Henry Ford was a crazy crank and airships were contrary to the Bible, for if God had wanted man to fly he would never have overlooked mentioning it in the Good Book; when cigarettes were looked on as effeminate and men chewed Spear Head and Mechanics' Delight and could spit with unbelievable accuracy at unlucky flies on the post office steps; when your mother saved the winter's ashes and made soft soap and when the young ladies wore sailor hats and the young men sported canes and wore box-toe shoes with enormous buttons. If you remember all these things, you're surely qualified as a genuine old-timer and entitled to a seat of honor in the Hall of Things That Used to Be.

The sponsors of the N. R. A. find many complexities contradictions cropping up in their endeavors to straighten things out and start the ball a-rolling. Just as you found slackers in the World War, so will you find slackers and cheats in the war for recovery. A veritable avalanche of protest drifts into the code headquarters from employes who are assured they are getting not a new deal but a raw deal from their employers. One worker writes that where he was formerly paid $33 per week, he now finds an additional $2 in his pay envelope, but there's a very obvious catch to it. His boss has promoted him to a "member of the firm" and as he is now considered a partner in the business, he can be worked as long as his superior feels fit. Either that or put on his hat and coat and go home. Naturally he doesn't want to do that, for in spite of the upward trend of business, jobs are not any too plentiful. That's one of the angles that's got to be ironed out. Of course you will always find men who will not shape their affairs to either the spirit or the letter of the law and it's these so-called business men who need a little special attention so that they may see the error of their ways. The average of honesty is still high but the world is still human and when one man makes a law there's two to beat it. If the man in business wants to play ball with the rest of the gang he's got to hitch up his pants, spit on his glove and groove it down the old alley. If he don't, it's just too bad and from the looks of things, it means a trip to the bench or maybe—suspension.

Statistics go to show that racketeering is one of our leading industries. Industries may not be just the word used but it conveys the meaning and from a money making point of view, it's a darned big industry, too. Business men were separated from over a billion dollars last year by the big shots of the game and that's enough cold cash to keep you and I in ham and eggs for a long, long time. No doubt honesty is the best policy, yet some of the boys who never heard of the word are doing very well, thank you.

Uncle Zeke and Hulda Visit the Stores

Summer boarders and pickles have upset the tranquility of our farm house. Hulda wants to earn money, so I consented to open the place a few weeks and let her go after entertaining. Right on the heels came canning and pickling with the kitchen range mussed up and odors of spices floating through the rooms. Between preparing victuals for hungry guests and squeezing beans, corn and jellies into jars, the old farm house has reeked with excitement. True to habit, Hulda made a dash for the village on Tuesday, with Yours Truly tagging on after a heated argument and useless remonstrance.

Hulda alighted, nimble like, and put straight for the Merchant Store, where the new fall creations in dresses and coats are on display. Summer goods are leaving the store because the fair, low prices have brought many customers who realize higher marks are not far ahead. New arrivals from the markets show class and attractive styles, yet the selling prices have not advanced in any large degree. However, every report shows more must be paid and now is the time to buy.

We stopped at Ashton's for two of the famous lobster salads with fixings. Both of us were captured by the new models of Atwater Kent and General Electric radio sets. Jazzy stuff was coming in beautifully and wifey felt the tingle of youth. Guess I had a spell also. We were shown about the store and told that the receivers can be tuned on long or short waves, that they are all electric and the latest word in mechanical construction. Calculate to buy one after the boarders cash in.

Out on the street we ran plumb into a neighbor. Nothing would do but we must cross over to the L. F. Pike Co., where his new made-to-measure suit was ready for delivery. It sure is a dandy, but friend neighbor has nothing over on me, as I was fixed up there three weeks ago. We found prices normal on about everything, but after a conversation with Mr. Pike, Hulda and your wise uncle advise on early purchase of that fall suit or overcat. Take it from us, you'll save money now over prices asked before snow flies.

Trip to Albany—Haying at Bartlett's

Friday, August 1st, after planning for some time to go to Albany, Maine, to visit Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Waterhouse and family, also our daughter, Grace Bartlett, who has been stopping with them for a few weeks past, at last the opportunity arrived like this: On the morning mentioned above, Frank Moody came along in his modern Buick car and very willingly offered transportation, saying that he and our son Irving were planning to go some place for a ride and they could go over there as well as anywhere else, and Mrs. Bartlett, daughter, Gertrude and the old man sat in. With Irvin at the wheel, the bunch started for Albany, thirty-two miles away, at around eight a. m., going to the new road in the Valley and to West Sumner, to Trap Corner, where we were at that point well on our way. "Now," says Frank, who of course was captain of the boat, "it is a little farther to go through South Paris and Norway, but it is a better road," so we turned towards the busy towns and in a very short while we were in South Paris, then Norway, one of the prettiest little villages to be found.

As we were passing through, I caught a glimpse of Mr. Sanborn, the owner of this paper, and I must say that he was speeding, perhaps I should say not a high powered car, but a typewriter in his office instead. Next we came to the entrance to the Panama Scout Camp on the shore of Pennesseewassee Lake, where we tarried for a few minutes and just after starting up, we began to meet the boys on the streets as they evidently were out exercising. We actually think there were sixty of more of them and they were a highly respectable and well behaved bunch of boys. It certainly is a credit to Maine to have them with us.

We passed the beautiful home of Leslie McIntire of East Waterford, North Waterford past the Five Kezars, one of which we could hardly see, the water being so nearly white with pond lilies. We never saw such a sight for lilies. We stopped several times to enjoy the many beautiful spots of scenery, one of which was Square Dock Mountain, much resembling our Ragged Jack Mountain back home. Now, as it was getting pretty well along towards the time for someone to feed us, we drove into the dooryard of Mr. and Mrs. Waterhouse, and our destination for at least a couple of hours. Here all hands seemed pleased to meet the party, even if it were pretty near meal time. We had travelled 48 miles.

This place, or rather, farm, is at the Albany Four Corners, right opposite the Town House, consequently no excuse for not going to town meeting regular. There are eighty-five acres in the farm and it has been the home of Mr. Bruce for more than forty years. Mr. Bruce is a member of the Waterhouse family, all of whom are cosy and comfortable in this good old country home, only seven miles from Locke's Mills. After dinner, Mr. Moody and our daughter, Grace, ran a one hundred yard foot race which was a snappy exhibition of speed, with Grace going to the wire a winner. We can easily say this visit of a couple of hours was very busily and pleasantly passed. When we were getting ready to leave there, Frank had something to say, like this, "I suggest we travel through Harrison village on our return." "Up to you, Frank," says the writer, as it was a new town to him. Bidding the folks bye-by, we started out, heading South through North Waterford, then to South Waterford by the beautiful Lake Keoka, and Bear Pond, coming out at North Bridgton, here we stopped at the Academy where Mr. Moody taught for a number of years, and his father also taught for nine years. Here we swung around the head of that most beautiful Long Lake with its many lovely sand beaches where dozens of people both old and young, were enjoying themselves in the water, there were boats of very description out on th lake and an abundance still on the shores, ready for let.

We entered Harrison Village where Mr. Moody renewed old acquaintances and enjoyed old home week celebration. The writer could almost say that we stopped at every house once and every two-story house twice, in that little village where nearly every person we met automatically extended a warm hand to Frank, even barbers leaving their chairs, which were occupied by customers, and going to the sidewalks to pass a brief moment with him.

Coming home in early evening, we passed Crystal Lake, crossing Crooked River several times. Soon we noticed we had looped the loop and were back at Lake Pennesseewassee and within twenty miles of our starting point which was a matter of a short time when we were driving into our door yard on the Green Woods road after passing a very pleasant day, both at the Waterhouse home and traveling through new country.

Haying on at Bartlett's. It was like this, Irvin Bartlett exchanged work with several good farmers, sort of playing second with Linn Farrar, who annually cuts around one hundred acres of hay for this one and that one, anywhere at any time, for anybody. Well, the boys had only two more farms to harvest the hay crop on, besides the Bartlett farm, and Linn brought his horses home August 5th, which was Saturday. Now listen, at seven a. m. Monday, Linn started in mowing on the Bartlett place and at eight o'clock Carl Bonney with his truck with hay rack attached, accompanied by Carl Abbott, drove in, not many minutes after Clifford Abbott came in with his horse hitched to a horse rake, putting the horse in the barn for a while, the three men hung up their scythes and got busy clipping around in places where Linn could not get with the machine, but around eleven Clifford hitched his horse to the rake and began raking, noon rolled along and all hands sat down to a green pea dinner, followed by a good smoke. Soon the three horses were in action again. And here came reinforcements, as Ike Doten and Charlie Farrar drove in, and just a few minutes later, Frank Moody.

Now, take my word, this was some haying crew of huskies, all well trained and hardened up for the occasion and rarin' to go. About three p. m., Linn had all the upland hay flat while the rest of the boys were busy raking and hauling in with the truck, and at five there were only two loads left in the field, so next morning Carl Bonney with his motorized hayrack accompanied by Charlie Farrar and Ike Doten, drove in and helped Irvin, also Jerry, who finished work for Cal Benson the night before, made quick work of those two loads left in the field over night. While bright and early that morning Linn was at Julian Dyer's where he was busy with his horses. Then Linn took a couple of days from haying and put his time on his trade, trading cattle, and Monday morning Linn and Irvin began helping Bert Thomas to get his meadows, from there Linn and Irvin went to Earl Howard's to assist in cutting his hay. Plenty of work, says Linn, for good men.

Emerson Bartlett recently sold a veal calf to George Spaulding, and Linn sold two to Earl Howard.

Mr. and Mrs. Olpha Varney and Jerry and Gertrude Bartlett went on Black Mt., blueberrying, last Saturday; came home well loaded, with berries.

There are times, however, when the more we learn, the less we desire to know.

Red Head, Tap-Dancer

By Harry C. Walker

CHAPTER VI

The Red Head paused and studied the round face beside her with open distress, but her glance became less cool when she perceived how harmless and friendly the man appeared, and how perturbed he was about finding the person he sought.

"How should I know who you're looking for?" she asked. Her answer was civil, but defensive.

The man squirmed under her steady gaze and forced a smile to his face.

"Well, you were the only one to get off that bus who comes anywhere near answering the description your employer of you—and he wrote that you'd arrive at this station this afternoon."

"My uncle?" echoed he girl, quite bewildered. Then she wondered if her aunt had notified her uncle in Paris, Henry Waite, that she was coming to New York. It was quite possible that the old people confided frequently one other by letter.

"Do you mean my Uncle Henry Waite??? she asked credulously.

"Yes, yes, that's the name," exclaimed the man in the manner of one who is suddenly reminded of a name that had slipped the mind. "He had a maiden aunt, Ella, years ago, and this morning she got a telegram from her begging her to send me down to meet you, his niece. So I'm a little late, but I'm relieved to see you all right. I would hate to have come had I missed you, for she thinks a lot of your uncle. If I had allowed you to east alone into this place I'd never heard the last of it."

"I see," the girl smiled at the measurably relieved to meet a person who could be trusted. "I'm glad you didn't miss me."

"So am I," said the man, and there was a sardonic tone to his voice that was lost to the Red Head.

She told him her name and explained that his was Rollin Burke. He knew what she had planned to do, and what she had told him, he said, was right. "Hotels. They're no place for a young girl like you. I'll take you to my aunt's place in my car as soon as my office closes. I've got a room there now, and if you wish you can come along and remain there during your time. You'll not be lonely down there. Then I'll drive you to Aunt Ella for the night. You'll like her, and also the house, for it is one of those big brownstone residences."

"You're more than kind, Mr. Burke. I shall be glad to do as you say. I hate to put you and your aunt to all this trouble," the girl said, her voice quickening pulses.

"No trouble at all, Miss—" Burke assured her quickly. "We're only too glad to do anything to please you, Miss Ferry."

Needless to say, Elaine Wilton was overjoyed at the prospect of being shown the inside of a lingerie manufacturing over night in an office downtown. Perhaps she could find work in the very office this man was taking her to, as there was a chance that his aunt would have a room to rent at a reasonable price.

"We'll go out to Broadway and take a taxi," said Mr. Burke, starting to believe the girl of the traveling cases. "It is time I was back at the office."

The pudgy hands of Mr. Burke, however, were not destined to be honored by carrying the luggage of the Little Red Head. As from thin air, four grim-faced men had appeared and surrounded them. Burke saw them and straightened instantly in great alarm, bringing his heavy cane up in a threatening motion. Elaine stared in wonderment at this new tableau, completely at a loss to comprehend its significance.

"So you're right at it," said an elderly man who was plainly the leader of the four. "Better put down the clubs and come along peacefully."

Burke scowled darkly at the speaker and slowly lowered his cane. "What's chewing you dumb sorcheads now?" he demanded in a great voice. "Can't you direct this lady to the nearest subway station, without you butting in?"

"So you crossed the street merely to offer her your services," said the old man. "Very considerate of you, especially as she didn't ask your assistance."

"But I'm not going to any subway," spoke the girl, hoping to clear the charged atmosphere. "Mr. Burke is going to take me up to his aunt's house after his office closes."

"That's all we want to know, miss," the leader smiled sadly. "Take the boys away."

The unfortunate Mr. Burke was soon roughly and marched forcibly across the street to a parked sedan. The man in front had done the talking remained to face the bewildered girl. He glanced down at her with a tired look in his calm gray eyes. A possible office job and a brownstone house faded into the background of Elaine Winton's mind. Anger and dismay possessed her. She had to admit that she had been completely duped by the fatherly-acting Burke, and she thought that she could be taken in so easily by the first man to approach her was exceedingly disturbing.

With quick determination, she forced her apparent rescuer and himself to look over with cool, skeptical eyes. The man was around fifty, she guessed, and was almost handsome with his gray hair, tanned, solid-appearing face and piercing eyes, undimmed by age. He was about Bradley Howard's height, and he was in good proportions.

"I'm sorry if we startled you, miss, but it was quite necessary that we should prevent that man from taking you anywhere."

"So it seems, but I don't know whether to thank you or not," she replied quickly. "You're right from the country, aren't you?" he asked bluntly.

This was more a statement than a question, and the Red Head did not answer it. "Continue," she said impertinently. "You probably know more about me than I do."

The man laughed, and there was a humor in his deep voice.

"You'd be surprised, young lady, to learn how much I do know about people like yourself. I ought to as I've been studying them here for twenty-odd years. You're all pretty much alike in that you leave home for the same reasons and come here with the same hopes and aspirations burning you up inside."

"If you'll pardon me, I'll be on my way," said the girl, determined to linger no longer to this person.

"Where are you going?"

"What does it matter to you?"

"Please don't be like that. I've a helping hand to scores of girls like you, and I'm still on the job. You're a stranger here and I don't think you have relatives living here or know a soul in the whole city. Is that not so?"

After due pause and deliberation, she admitted reluctantly that he had guessed the truth.

"Then you're going to do as I say for the time being. You are too pretty to be cut loose in this town."

"Oh," she said lightly. "I'm pretty, am I?"

"Humph! Just as though I'm the first one to tell you that," he retorted.

"No one of your age ever said it convincingly before," she smiled up

"You mean my Uncle Henry Waite?" she asked credulously.

"He knew my mother, Ella, years ago, and this morning I got a telegram from him, asking me to send me down here to look after his niece. So here I am, a little late. "Let him her name and he said he was Rollin Burke. He asked what she planned to do, and when she told him, he said, "Forget the subway. You're no place for a nice girl like you. I'll run you up to your place in my car as soon as the office closes. I've got to go back there, and if you wish, you may wait there and remain there until closing time. You'll not be in the way at all. Then I'll deliver you to your door for the night. You'll love the old house she owns. It's one of those big brownstone residences."

"You are more than kind, Mr. Burke. I shall be glad to do as you say, but I must leave you and your aunt to all explain," the girl told him, with quickening pulses.

"That's all we want to know, miss," the leader smiled sadly. "Take him along boys."

The unfortunate Mr. Burke was seized roughly and marched forcibly across the street to a parked sedan. The man who had done the talking remained beside the bewildered girl. He glanced down at her with a tired look in his calm gray eyes. A possible office job and a brownstone house faded into the background of Elaine Winton's mind. Anger and dismay possessed her. She had a feeling that she had been completely duped by the bitterly-acting Burke, and the thought that she could be taken in so easily by the first man to approach her was exceedingly disturbing.

With quick determination, she faced her apparent rescuer and looked him over with cool, skeptical eyes. The man was around fifty, she guessed, and was almost handsome with his gray hair, tanned, solid-appearing face and piercing eyes, undimmed by age. He was tall, about Bradley Howard's height, and built in good proportions.

"I'm sorry if we startled you, miss, but it was quite necessary that we should prevent that man from taking you anywhere."

"So it seems, but I don't know whether to thank you or not," she replied quickly.

"You're right from the country, aren't you?" he asked bluntly.

This was more a statement than a question, and the Red Head did not like it. "Continue," she said impertinently. "You probably know more about me than I do."

The man laughed, and there was real humor in his deep voice.

"You'd be surprised, young lady, to learn how much I do know about people like yourself. I ought to as I've been studying them here for twenty-odd years. You're all pretty much alike in that you leave home for the same reasons and come here with the same hopes and aspirations burning you up inside."

"If you'll pardon me, I'll be on my way," said the girl, determined to listen no longer to this person.

"Where are you going?"

"What does it matter to you?"

"Please don't be like that. I've lent a helping hand to scores of girls like you, and I'm still on the job. You're a stranger here and I don't think you have relatives living here or know a soul in the whole city. Is that not so?"

After due pause and deliberation, she admitted reluctantly that he had guessed the truth.

"Then you're going to do as I say for the time being. You are too pretty to be cut loose in this town."

"Oh," she said lightly. "I'm pretty, am I?"

"Humph! Just as though I'm the first one to tell you that," he retorted.

"No one of your age ever said it so convincingly before," she smiled up at him quickly, deciding that she could like this firm featured man with the graying hair.

"You're probably hungry after the long trip. Come along and I'll have a bite to eat with you."

"Why should I trust myself with you? Are you a policeman?"

"Sort of," he smiled in a friendly way. "I'm a detective sergeant, detailed to prevent girls like you from believing men like Burke."

"Prove it. I demand concrete evidence," the girl demanded, determined not to be taken for another sleigh ride.

A frown puckered the man's forehead for a space; then he laughed indulgently and pulled back a side of his coat. Elaine saw a badge that appeared official enough. She set down one of the cases she still held and fingred the shield of bright metal carefully and read the words inscribed upon its glinting surface.

"It doesn't feel like tin," she decided.

"It isn't. Satisfied?"

"Quite. I'm hungry and thirsty and tired."

They entered a small cafe just off roadway, and the Red Head felt much better after partaking of a refreshing salad and a glass of iced tea.

"My name is Wales Duncan," said the elderly man.

Merchants' Bargain Day—Campers' Day

Bridgton's Merchants' Bargain Days are on August 21 and 22, with the climax on Tuesday, August 22, when the Campers' Day parade takes place at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, standard. It is expected that there will be 5,000 or more in the line, headed by the American Legion Band.

There will be campers, on foot, on horseback, campers' floats and decorated private cars; horribles, etc. An appeal has been sent out for the merchants to take part. Every merchant has been asked to have his business represented in some way—by a car, a truck, or truck float or in any other way he may desire to be represented.

A loud speaker system is to be installed with speakers at Pondicherry and Post Office Squares so that everybody will know what is going on.

A band concert will immediately follow the parade and this concert is to be sent out over the loud speakers so that it may be heard nearly anywhere in town.

Prizes in the shape of banners are to be awarded for the best appearing boys' camp; the best girls' camp; the best float, the best decorated private car; the worst horrible; the largest boys' camp; the largest girls' camp; the largest mounted camp.

The judges will review the parade at the band stand in Post Office Square and the prizes will be announced during the band concert.

The parade will leave the Fair Grounds about 2 o'clock and proceed down South High to Monument Square; thence down Main Street to Mechanic; thence around to Flint Street and up Main to Post Office Square, thence down Depot Street, where it will break ranks.

It is expected that this will be the biggest parade ever seen in Bridgton and that it will be witnessed by the largest crowd.

In the evening a Grand Minstrel Show will end the day at the Town Hall. This show is given by the band and promises to be one of the best.

Every day it looks more and more as if August 22 will see the greatest throng of people ever congregated in Bridgton. The event is intensively advertised over an area taking in all the towns from North Conway, N. H., to Windham and from Kezar Falls and Cornish to Norway. Large six page advertising folders have been sent out, showing what the Bridgton merchants have to offer with a history of the Bridgton Band.
